Life Line Screening: Another Company Peddling Bad Medicine With Deceptive Advertising

Health Letter, April 2015

By Vikram Krishnasamy, M.D., and Michael Carome, M.D.

In 2014, Public Citizen launched a campaign against Winter Park, Fla.-based HealthFair, a company that peddles inexpensive cardiovascular disease screening packages to people across the country.

That campaign began in June 2014, when Public Citizen wrote letters to 20 hospitals and medical institutions in eight states urging them to sever their partnerships with HealthFair because the company's heavily promoted communitywide cardiovascular health screening packages are marketed to people for whom the screenings are medically inappropriate, are unethical and are much more likely to do harm than good.

The campaign so far has achieved remarkable success, with 15 of these institutions since indicating that they have ended or will soon be ending their partnerships with the company.

Public Citizen's campaign continued in September 2014, when the organization asked the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) to investigate HealthFair's direct-to-consumer (DTC) advertising and promotional activities. Public Citizen alleged that the company's advertising and promotional materials were deceptive and contained unsubstantiated medical claims. The FTC's review of our complaint is ongoing.

Unfortunately, HealthFair is not the only for-profit company offering inappropriate medical screenings to consumers in the U.S. Austin, Texas-based Life Line Screening, a much larger for-profit medical screening company, also partners with hospitals across the country to promote and offer inappropriate DTC health screening tests for cardiovascular disease and for osteoporosis.

According to Life Line Screening's website and print solicitations, mailed directly to consumers, the company has "helped save thousands of lives" since 1993 and has prevented strokes and other types of cardiovascular disease.

But Life Line Screening has no evidence from rigorously conducted clinical tests proving that its screening tests save lives and prevent strokes and other cardiovascular diseases when used in the general population that its solicitations target. Instead, the company relies on testimonials and anecdotal reports from a small group of people who were screened by the company and claim to have benefited.

On Jan. 22, Public Citizen urged the FTC to investigate the DTC advertising and promotional practices of Life Line Screening. In its letter to the FTC, Public Citizen asserted that the company's advertising materials make non-evidence-based claims of medical benefit for its package of cardiovascular disease and osteoporosis screening tests. The letter further stated that Life Line Screening's advertisements omit information about the risks of adverse health-related outcomes and financial harms that may result from the indiscriminate screening offered by the company and about evidence-based guidelines describing if and when such tests should be performed.

On Feb. 19, following submission of its complaint to the FTC, Public Citizen expanded its campaign against Life Line Screening by writing letters to 73 hospitals in 24 states that had partnered with the company to promote its unethical screening practices. Echoing the same themes as those in the letters sent to HealthFair's partners, Public Citizen called on these hospital partners to immediately terminate their relationships with Life Line Screening, citing five primary reasons:

- There is widespread consensus among medical experts that the package of cardiovascular and osteoporosis screening tests promoted by Life Line Screening is not appropriate for unselected, asymptomatic individuals in the general population and is more likely to cause harm than to provide benefit. No guidelines issued by any major medical professional organization support such screening practices.
- The promotion of Life Line Screening's primary screening package relies on fearmongering — scaring healthy individuals about their future health.
- For many people, false-positive test results from this screening can lead to unfounded anxiety and additional unnecessary, risky and costly diagnostic procedures and treatment interventions. Moreover, false-positive test results can lead to financial harms because of the costs of unnecessary follow-up testing and interventions.
- Screening unselected, asymptomatic people will lead to overdiagnosis, which occurs when individuals are diagnosed with conditions that will never progress to cause symptoms or death. Like a false-positive result, overdiagnosis leads to unnecessary anxiety and unnecessary medical interventions.

Screening results are provided to you in 21 days. We direct all participants with abnormal results to take the report to their physician. Carotid Artery and PAD screenings help identify the presence of Atherosclerosis, and if found, can be an early warning for higher risks of stroke and coronary artery disease. Such early warning information can help you and your doctor take important steps to reduce your risk for more serious health issues. If necessary, steps may include lifestyle and diet, medical therapies, and even more thorough follow-up testing and evaluation of your heart function. Appropriate modification of risk factors (including high blood pressure, smoking, heart disease, diabetes and poor diet) is also necessary for cardiovascular disease prevention. Our screenings cannot detect all forms of stroke risk or cardiovascular disease. All tests are for screening purposes only. You should consult with your personal physician regarding your screening results. Insurance Note: Life Line Screening does not participate in the Medicare program and the cost of our screening services is not covered or reimbursable by Medicare. Make sure to get your blood pressure, cholesterol, height, weight, and waist size checked.

Consider

Vascular screening may be right for you. Though you are on the younger side, your risk factors potentially make you a candidate. Please consult with your doctor and consider your personal preferences about screening.

Recommended

Vascular screening is most likely right for you. You have at least 2 risk factors, including your age. These risk factors make you a candidate.

Other factors may impact your risk such as gender, ethnicity, and Body Mass Index. Please consult with your doctor.

Not Recommended

You are in an appropriate age group to consider vascular screening, but do not have enough risk factors to warrant screenings at this time. If you have several "Unknown" make sure to get those answers and then take the quiz again just to doublecheck.
